The Baker

Genuinely cheerful, warm, perpetually covered in flour.

OBJECTIVE: Follow the whispers of scandal to uncover a family secret that keeps The Heartbroken Ghost from finding peace.

The Dressmaker

Obsessed with the bride who never wore her dress.

OBJECTIVE: Follow the whispers of scandal to uncover a family secret that keeps The Heartbroken Ghost from finding peace.

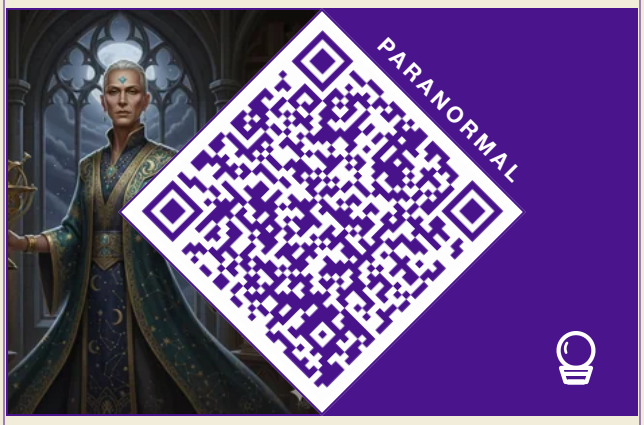

The Psychotherapist

Warm listener who psychoanalyzes everyone around them.

OBJECTIVE: Follow the whispers of scandal to uncover a family secret that keeps The Heartbroken Ghost from finding peace.

The Astrologer

Stargazer who reads the heavens for things the living refuse to hear.

OBJECTIVE: A presence lingers here, desperate to be heard. Listen to the dead, and guide The Lonely Spirit to rest.

The Dressmaker

SKILLS

Paranormal | Montrose Family | Monroe Family

INITIAL QUEST: Find the Unfinished Wedding Dress

YOUR STORY: You're descended from Elias Monroe, the dressmaker who created Cordelia Montrose's wedding dress in 1925. The dress that was never worn. The bride who never made it to the altar. Your family has preserved everything from Elias's workshop—his tools, his sketches, his correspondence. But most importantly: the dress itself. White silk, delicate lace, perfect in every detail. A masterpiece that was never worn. Elias was in love with Cordelia. Everyone in your family knows this story. He sent her flowers, wrote her poems, and begged her not to marry Sebastian Crane. Yes, not everyone knows who Cordelia was engaged to. Few people even remember that name: Sebastian Crane. It's as if he was erased from history. But you grew up with this story. You grew up with the dress. You can't stop thinking about Cordelia—the romantic, tragic bride. You preserve her dress like a shrine. You research her life, her death, what could have been. Some people think you've let it take up too much room in your life. Maybe they're right. But you need to know the truth. What happened to Cordelia? Why did she die?

The Baker

SKILLS

Paranormal | History | Eleanor's Legacy

INITIAL QUEST: Find the Unfinished Wedding Dress

YOUR STORY: You grew up without a family. You never knew your parents, and no one could ever tell you where you truly came from. All you have is an old diary—worn, fragile, precious—that somehow ended up with you. The diary was written by someone named Eleanor. She writes about being adopted, about not knowing her real parents. She writes about searching for identity, for belonging. You don't know if Eleanor was your grandmother, great-grandmother, or some other relative. But her words speak to you across the generations. The diary contains a bread recipe—"my grandmother bread recipe," Eleanor calls it. You've been baking this bread your whole life and today you run "Sweet Rose Bakery", which has been featured on several popular food channels. Recently, you've started having strange feelings. Dreams. The face of a beautiful woman with a pearl necklace calling to you. A sense that you're connected to something bigger than yourself. When you heard about the investigation at the old Montrose mansion, something drew you here. You don't know why, but you feel like you need to be here.

The Astrologer

SKILLS

Paranormal | History

INITIAL QUEST: Find the Crystal Ball - Antique Scrying Sphere

YOUR STORY: You've always believed that the stars shape human destiny. Not in the horoscope-in-the-newspaper sense—in the real, ancient, mathematical sense. Planetary alignments influence events. Timing matters. The cosmos is a clock, and those who know how to read it can harness extraordinary power. Your obsession with the occult led you down countless rabbit holes, but one hit close to home: the notebooks of Sebastian Crane, a pharmacist and chemist from 1920s Long Beach. He combined ancient alchemical wisdom with modern pharmaceutical science. He was trying to bridge two worlds that everyone else insisted were separate. In your opinion, the man was brilliant. Ahead of his time. But his notebooks hint at more than chemistry—sacred alignments, visions, communion with the unseen. Most dismiss these writings as the ramblings of an eccentric. You believe he was documenting something real. When you heard about the investigation at the Montrose mansion—a place Sebastian walked in the 1920s, and where a presence is said to still linger—you jumped at the chance. You want to understand what Sebastian truly glimpsed, and hear what the spirits of that house have been trying to say.

The Psychotherapist

SKILLS

Montrose Family | Crane Family | Whitmore Family | Monroe Family | Hartley Family

INITIAL QUEST: Find the Unfinished Wedding Dress

YOUR STORY: You're a psychotherapist, but your real work happens between the lines. You study generational trauma—the way pain, shame, and unspoken secrets pass down through families like invisible inheritance. Descendants mourn losses they can't name. Whole lives are shaped by griefs no one ever told them about. You've built a career listening for the silences. So when you heard about the Montrose mansion—three deaths in eleven days, a century of silence, and families still not free of it—you couldn't stay away. You've been quietly researching the Montroses, the Cranes, the Whitmores, the Monroes, the Hartleys. Name changes. Obsessive preservation of artifacts. A branch of the family tree someone took scissors to. You told yourself you were here to observe. But the living always lead you to where the dead are still hurting—and this house is full of them.